

Using the Golden Vortex

The Golden Vortex (GV), is a major new approach to magnetic health appliances. Unlike other devices that use magnets touting only magnetic attraction the GV manipulates magnetic spin fields to directly harmonize with the sympathetic nervous system.

Clean the GV with soap and warm water and avoid harsh chemicals. The magnets are small but powerful, so don't put the device near credit cards or electronic equipment. Don't use the GV on the body within a foot of implants like pace makers.

Dynamic spin is dissimilar on each side of the device. The smooth side is designed to be against the skin as a physical application, and the lettered side is thought to have a more mental or emotional antidote, so be alert to personal reactions and in the end choose the side that seems to work best.

The GV has three basic functions:

One. Wear it as a pendant using a cord or chain. Some people report feelings of added energy, and tell of being more aware of their surroundings; like being able to react faster to driving emergencies.

Two. Using body tape from any pharmacy, attach the GV directly on a pain spot, or on any area of concern. Masking tape sticks, but don't leave it on more than a day as it can cause a skin rash. The GV can be slipped under a bandage, or the elastic top of an otherwise worn-out stocking.

Three. Drawing or pouring water through the GV's center hole seems to cause water to reassign its molecules to 6-sided clusters. This "Hexagonal Water" has been identified as the reason for the longevity of the Hunza people of northern Pakistan. It's said that the Hunza water is the result of being oxygenated and radiated by sunlight as it falls from heights, but we think that the Hunza people live to a 100 and more because of the electromagnetic properties of the Vortex area in which they live.

Run water into a glass through a small non-metal funnel that fits the 3/8" center hole then drink. Water can also be simply poured into the hole, or drawn through a straw inserted through the hole. Make sure the water emerges from the smooth side of the GV. Spray or splash treated water on your hair and it may feel like you just had a shampoo. We've had reports that wrinkles have become less prominent when the water is allowed to air dry on the skin.

Machines that make Hexagonal water are commercially available, but even simple ones can cost as much as $500 and aren't portable. The famous Kangen Water machines are marvelous in terms of the health results but these machines can cost as much as $4,000. The GV, does not remove impurities or particles but smaller, far less expensive filters can be used with the GV, which is small enough to travel so that water where you are is treatable thus eliminating packing several water bottles with you! Just remember to filter the water before running it through the GV, because it has been shown that putting the already treated water through the filter reverts it back to a typical five-sided molecular structure.

Also microwaving the treated water seems to break down the clusters, but slowly heating it or pouring a prepared hot drink down the funnel is fine. Drinking the water before bed may cause frequent bathroom trips, but after a few days when the body becomes adjusted to the new water a clearing of the urine may be noticed. Testimony from users say that gastric distresses respond well, and others claim to have had relief from years of constipation. One user believes it kept the surgeon's scalpel away from a serious colitis problem. We pass on such comments without confirmation or knowledge to the contrary.

Using the lettered side of the GV appears to affect viruses and bacteria, shortening the symptoms of colds or flu. It should be located at the base of the neck between the clavicles as soon as one feels that familiar warning of a sore throat.

When left on the body in a prolonged exposure the GV has been noticed to cause a minor nerve ache. Should any application result in this kind of distress simply remove the device and wait a few hours before reapplying for any other condition. Sometimes the GV seems to absorb pain in a kind of empathic feed-back loop. So, the ache may actually be signaling an over-treatment, perhaps even the removal of a condition.

The GV apparently boosts body energy. This can be seen. When wearing it as a pendant hold a hand out so that it is visible under an illuminating bright light. full-spectrum illumination is best to use but incandescent light should function when holding the hand over any dark background; such as a backdrop of black, navy blue, or even dark brown. When such a background has been established spread the fingers while slowly moving the hand back and forth while looking between the fingers. Track the hand as it moves across the dark set-up and soon a slight distortion in the air around the fingers and hand should appear; like a filmy white mist or haze between and around the fingers. This deformation of the air is a part of the body's own energy field...the well-known aura should become amplified and revealed to the gaze of even mere mortals!

Many have said the device augments meditation. The GV's flat sides are for physical or mental welfare, but by holding the device upright between the middle and ring fingers something else seems to come into play. Is the spirit engaged? A wave of sensation seems to move along the joints like cool water, but some experience warmth, while others have reported tingling.

These feelings are generally felt the first few times the users hold the GV in their hands, but as time goes on the user finds that the sensations seem to fade into the background. It may seem that the device is no longer working but this is not a correct observation...the user is literally gotten used to the device...it's working just fine!

The device intervenes between the body and the Earth's magnetic field. A body's spatial orientation to the Earth will dictate the use of the GV. When the body is horizontal to the Earth's surface; lying in bed for instance, the normal reactions are altered, sometimes reversing itself from all that has been described up to here. So, when going to bed and wanting to treat a pain one should tape or otherwise hold the GV in the meditation position. This means if you want to work on pain in bed tape it between the fingers. However, when flat under your pillow with the lettered side up it may provide for some very interesting dreaming, and (who knows) maybe even some morning wake-up eureka moments.

Some have mentioned that the GV magnet water removes rust and tooth plaque. Others have wistfully said the GV turns mediocre wines into vintage years. We make no determination about any of this, but hope you will report any of your own discoveries, and always remember:

The Golden Vortex or the water it produces can't do anything unless it is used!
